Saving Butterflies

Disney is working with conservation organizations, zoos, and aquariums across California and Florida to restore butterfly habitats and reintroduce threatened species back to the wild. These efforts are helping to recover populations of Atala butterflies, Miami blue butterflies, monarch butterflies, and Schaus' swallowtail butterflies among several other species.

Saving Sea Turtles

Disney has been helping to monitor, study and protect sea turtles on the beaches outside Disney's Vero Beach Resort for nearly two decades and recently celebrated the millionth sea turtle hatchling recorded through this conservation effort. Our Disney Team Wildlife Cast Members work alongside respected conservation organizations to ensure a future for Florida sea turtles and work to inspire people to take action to support healthy oceans.

Restoring Balance

Disney is focused on global efforts aimed at restoring imperiled habitats in areas important to our business. From forests in Indonesia, to watersheds in California, and coastal ecosystems in Florida among other projects, our grants are working to create a healthier planet for people, plants and wildlife to call home.

Animal Disaster Response

The Disney Conservation Fund is proud to support the International Fund for Animal Welfare (IFAW) to help carry forward its commitment to helping communities and animals when they need it the most.

Protecting the Wildlife that Call Disney Home

Many animals make their homes on Disney properties around the world. Disney Conservation Team Wildlife works with organizations to study and support local wildlife populations. These efforts include everything from supporting pollinator habitats at Disney solar arrays, to participating in species population surveys in dedicated conservation areas and ensuring housing for nesting purple martin birds that migrate every year between the U.S. and Brazil.

Restoring and Rescuing Coral Reefs
Disney Conservation Team Wildlife scientists have been supporting local and international programs aimed at supporting the rescue, care and restoration of threatened coral reefs. Our teams are currently working on long-term strategies to restore reefs in Florida and The Bahamas, growing and eventually replanting corals resilient to the effects of threats like disease and climate change.
