

How We Work with Factories, Farms and Mills

Promoting fair labor practices and safe working conditions throughout Patagonia's supply chain

Corporate Responsibility is a broad-based movement in business that encourages companies to take responsibility for the impact of their activities on customers, employees, communities and the environment. Companies committed to corporate responsibility also agree to abide by international labor and human rights standards.

Here's what we're doing to ensure that Patagonia products are produced under safe, fair, legal and humane working conditions throughout the supply chain—and some background on how we got to where we are today.

Download our finished goods supplier list

Working With Factories

Patagonia engages in a range of due diligence activities to promote fair labor practices and ensure good working conditions in our factories.

Working With Mills

Patagonia travels the globe building relationships with suppliers that make high-quality materials while reducing their environmental and social impact.

California Transparency in Supply Chains Act of 2010 (SB 657)

Our SB 657 disclosure statement outlines some of the steps we're taking to monitor and assist our supply chain partners in meeting our human rights standards, particularly in the areas of human trafficking and child labor.

We guarantee everything we make.

View Ironclad Guarantee

Know how your clothes are made.

View Our Footprint

Keep your gear in play.

Visit Worn Wear

We give back for every sale.

View 1% for the Planet

