UK Modern Slavery Act Statement

Dyson Slavery and Human Trafficking Statement 2017

Dyson is a global technology company committed to conducting ethical and environmentally responsible business. Dyson is headquartered in the UK and manufactures in Singapore, Malaysia and the Philippines.

Dyson and its suppliers work to an ethical and environmental code of conduct which sets out Dyson’s requirements in relation to labour practices, health and safety, responsible sourcing and environmental standards. Dyson is clear that forced labour in any form is unacceptable.

Dyson has a dedicated Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) team that works with suppliers through a combination of assessments using ethical database Sedex, supplier training and audits. Dyson uses information from Sedex risk assessments to help prioritise suppliers for audit. In addition to audits, Dyson operates a third party hotline for workers to make contact and raise any issues relating to working conditions.

Audits are conducted by Dyson auditors or by independent CSR auditors. In order to fully understand the working environment in a supplier facility, the auditors interview a cross-section of the workforce without management present.

Signed by:

Max Conze, CEO

This statement is made pursuant to section 54(1) of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and constitutes Dyson’s slavery and human trafficking statement.